EXPERIMENT 1

Zero-shot, One-shot and Few-shot Prompts - Product Description for a Smart Fitness Watch

AIM

To design zero-shot, one-shot and few-shot prompts for generating a product description of a Smart Fitness Watch and to observe how the number of examples affects the generated text.

PROCEDURE

1. Open an LLM chat interface (such as ChatGPT, Gemini or Claude) in a new chat.
2. Zero-shot: enter an instruction that describes only the task (write a product description for a Smart Fitness Watch) without any example, and note the response.
3. One-shot: start a new chat and enter the same instruction together with ONE worked example, followed by the actual task. Note the response.
4. Few-shot: start a new chat and enter the same instruction together with THREE worked examples (two or three, as listed below), followed by the actual task. Note the response.
5. Capture a screenshot of each prompt with its generated output.
6. Compare the three outputs and record the observations.

RESULT

The zero-shot prompt produced a correct but generic description of 64 words with no fixed structure. The one-shot prompt produced a more persuasive description (58 words) that copied the tone and length of the example and included specific features. The few-shot prompt produced output in exactly the format shown in the examples: a tagline, a description and a list of key features.

CONCLUSION

Providing examples guides the LLM towards the desired tone, length and format. Zero-shot prompting is quick but gives generic text, one-shot prompting improves style matching, and few-shot prompting gives the most consistent and well-structured product description.
